the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has declined by 100 million.

But the world is still a long way from achieving the goal of eradicating hunger. In 1996, 800 million people were undernourished, and the number of people who are undernourished is still increasing.

There are many reasons why the world is still a long way from achieving the goal of eradicating hunger. One of the main reasons is that the world's population is still growing rapidly.

Another reason is that the world's food production is still not enough to feed everyone. In 1996, the world produced enough food to feed 10 billion people, but only 6 billion people were actually eating it.

There are many other reasons why the world is still a long way from achieving the goal of eradicating hunger. But the fact is that the world is still a long way from achieving this goal.

There are many things that we can do to help the world achieve this goal. One of the most important things is to increase food production.

Another important thing is to reduce food waste. In 1996, the world wasted 1 billion kilograms of food. This is a huge amount of food that is being thrown away.

There are many other things that we can do to help the world achieve this goal. But the fact is that the world is still a long way from achieving this goal.
